

Executive Communication: Image and Presentation Skills

Topic: This 24 hour course is designed for today's professionals at all levels of the Management and Executive spectrum. The course will take an in depth look at communications and the specific elements that lead to powerful and effective presentations. The course is intended to improve communication skills by providing participants with tools that they can use to enhance their personal credibility in their interactions with others. Through the use of practical exercise and video feedback, this class will help participants internalize basic communications principles.

This course is designed to be participant, rather than instructor, centered. Each person will see themselves at least twice a day on video, which will help participants identify traits that can detract from their personal credibility and teach them how to make effective changes in their communications and presentations.

Instructor: Clark Stuart, the President and Founder of Trident Professionals, is a retired Naval Officer who was a member of the Navy SEALs for over 22 years. In addition to being an Advanced Training Officer and a Scout Sniper Instructor, he holds a BS and a Master's degree in Business Management. Clark has completed the Navy's Instructor Training Course, Executive Communications Training Development, and Northrop Grumman Master Instructor in Operational Deception. His areas of expertise include behavioral dynamics, interview management, presentation skills, operational deception, clandestine operations, and Leadership and Influence techniques. It is Clark's rare and unique perspective of leadership and the degree of motivation required to excel in different leadership roles that make this course powerful and highly informative.
